A well-known photographer of the 1920s who was also a regular contributor to the Parisian magazine "Le Sourire", Madeleine Maridan, belonged to that group of artists who were fascinated by the brand identity of their time. They wanted to break with the bourgeois snobbery that found expression in the collections of their uncle, the painter and illustrator Georges Duperré, and who constantly employed in their work the publicity of mass-circulation magazines. Поша: Изабрано • La Fonten Basne - pdf страница с илюстрацијами. He is frequently asked to preside over conferences and university colloquiums, as the designer and director of exhibitions and displays throughout the United States and Canada. An active scholar, teacher, and advocate for the Yiddish language and culture, he is the author of a number of books, including The Jewish Response to Modernity, and edited volumes on Modern Hebrew Literature, Modern Yiddish Literature, and Exile and Return (in conjunction with The New Jewish Studies Series from North American Jewish Studies). He is currently editing a series of books on Modern Yiddish Poetry and Drama and Modern Yiddish Drama and Theatre. He has just completed an encyclopedia of Modern Yiddish literature, and is preparing a much-anticipated translation of the classic Yiddish novel by Sholem Aleichem, The Last Manor. When asked about "new" Yiddish literature, he directs us to consider the renewed interest in Yiddish culture and history, as well as the emerging field of Yiddish literature and politics, and "more broadly, the new interest in Jewish identity" and, of course, the rise of the new Jewish nationalism. Professor Yerushalmi is the first to claim that the future of Yiddish has much to do with the present world of Jewish revival and empowerment, whether it is f678ea9f9e
